

MOUNTAIN LIVING[®]

LET THE OUTDOORS IN!

July 2013

WINDOW DRESSING Give your porch the polish of an indoor living room by dressing the windows with draperies. Choose a durable fabric that can stand up to sunlight, stains and moisture—like acrylic or polyester—in a solid neutral color or subtle pattern that won't detract from the views. And to make those views—and the entire space—seem even bigger, draw the eye up to the ceiling by hanging the curtain rod above the top of the windows.

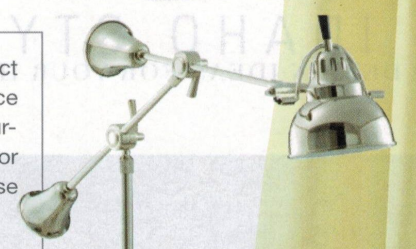

THE GREAT INDOORS

Views of Montana's Flathead Lake inspired architect Arthur Andersson to create this transitional space between indoors and outdoors. But it's the fine furnishings—and cozy woodstove—selected by interior designer Mimi London that inspire its owners to use the room year round. Here's how to get the look:

Curtains
Solid Outdoor Drapes in Natural, from $69 per panel; Orvis, orvis.com

Floor Lamp
Articulating Floor Lamp, $599; Mobilia, mobilia.ca

Coffee Table
Leblon Coffee Table in peroba and mahogany, High Fashion Home, highfashionhome.com for pricing

Armchair
Madeira Chair with Ottoman in Rustic Brown rattan, $579; Ballard Designs, ballarddesigns.com

WARMING TREND This porch's sleek woodstove throws off heat on chilly winter nights—and offers a convenient cooktop that's perfect for warming up a pot of hot chocolate. Don't have the space or budget for something this elaborate? A smaller woodstove will offer just as much charm and an efficient source of heat. Denver-based Home & Hearth Outfitters (homeandhearthoutfitters.com) is one of our favorite sources for classic cast-iron stoves.
